I've always liked the dual display, it makes sense for me and it has been the easiest thing I have ever tried to do without having to worry about the screen size affecting things. I have also tried multiple keyboards, and while they all made it possible, my issue is the keyboard layout. I've found that I like to type on one or two of my keyboard layouts, but at times I need my keyboard space, or my eye will wander down to the screen so I'll have to keep switching back, which can be difficult. It is very important that you buy something that you truly LOVE before going on holiday in Thailand and buying all kinds of things to try and keep the "holiday effect". You need to find ways to keep the holidays going by buying something to stay with and being able to come back to Thailand again for visits after the long stay.
