I'm having a problem with reading through the documentation and I'm finding that all the tutorials about switching between toggling off and on modes are very difficult to follow, and involve very strange concepts. What I'm trying to do is have Calc automatically switch between inverted and non-inverted mode, depending on my reading skills at the moment. I want to read with normal, non-inverted mode, then flip it on for reading all the numbers off the top of the screen and reading left to right, then flip it back off for reading headings and paragraphs. A: I see that the setting actually is located in the calcevalc spreadsheet.

In that file it is under [Document]. The setting is very simple, it is called "formula background". The example from a LibreOffice installation that I used can be found here. To change it use the settings dialogue of the spreadsheet. You can then set it to "Non inverted" or "Inverted". A self-evidently ridiculous flag June 25, 2012 The Vancouver Sun is not very well-regarded as a newspaper. I used to think that this was primarily due to their ludicrous name. They do seem to sell more newspapers than the other major dailies, which they are undoubtedly entitled to do given that they are the largest-circulation tabloid in Canada, and they are substantially larger in area than the other two major dailies, which do tend to have more credibility (the the Toronto Sun's circulation is in decline, for example, and they have a total circulation of about 60,000 compared to the Sun's over 350,000). Still, I was wrong, in large part because of their vexing name. The Vancouver Sun is not a newspaper, it is a tabloid, and it has a tabloid-like attitude to almost everything that it covers. Whether or not it is a bad thing for a newspaper to be tabloid-like, it is a bad thing for a paper with a newspaper-like name to be tabloid-like. I'm not saying that
